Provider Grant

By: Larry Kincaid, Program Director

I'm pleased to announce that once again MountainHeart North will be offering a provider grant to help family child care providers and child care facilities in our region to meet the health and safety requirements and to reward those who have completed the requirements to move up a tier on the tiered reimbursement system.

The health and safety grant will consist of a list of items that can be selected or a cash award of up to $250.00 for approved health and safety items. A limited number of health and safety grants are available and will be awarded based upon the availability of the funds.

In order to be eligible for consideration for the health and safety grant, the provider will need to complete an application and present the application to their Regulatory Specialist for approval. When the application is received in the MountainHeart office, it will be reviewed to insure that it meets all of the grant requirements. An award letter will then be sent to child care providers whose grant was approved. The award letter will detail further instructions on how to proceed. Unfortunately, child care centers are not eligible to receive this grant.

Health and safety grant applications may be obtained at your local MountainHeart office, at the MountainHeart website (www.mountain-heart.org/ccsnorth.htm) or from your Regulatory Specialist after October 15, 2008. The submission deadline for the health and safety grant will be November 14, 2008.

For those who wish to receive a grant for successfully completing the requirements to move up a tier on the tiered reimbursement system, you must complete the tiered reimbursement application (available at http://www.wvdhhr.org/bcf/ece/earlycare/tiered_reimb.asp) and submit with appropriate documentation to:

West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources
Division of Early Care and Education
Attention: Jessica Crouch
350 Capitol Street, Room B-18
Charleston, West Virginia 25301

These grant opportunities are made available by the West Virginia Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Early Care and Education. The grantor reserves the right to determine which applications will be approved and awarded a grant.

Transition Tips

by: Tara Bowley, EC Specialist

Children like specific routines and enjoy doing things the same way each time. When children know what to expect it gives them a sense of security, a feeling of safety, and it helps them to handle their stress better.

When getting ready for transitions or changes, it is a good idea to take the gentle approach and do things in steps if possible. For example, if you know that a child has a hard time with saying goodbye at drop-off time, work with the parent to come up with ways to ease this transition. Possible ways include:

- Having the parent spend at least 10-15 minutes with the child before leaving.
- The parent and child can develop a quick, fun ritual that they share when they arrive.
- Letting the child know when the parent is going to leave. Parents should not just "disappear" without saying goodbye.
- Reassure the child that the parent will pick him/her up at a specific time. "After nap, you have snack, then you play, then your Mommy will pick you up."

Providing children with structure and daily routines helps build their self-confidence, and self-confidence is a key element in the ability to handle change. For all children, no matter what their age, they will need time, support, and love as they adjust to changes.

Training Registration & Cancellation Reminder

Child care providers who wish to attend Mountain-Heart training sessions should call the Elkins office to register. If you register for a training and later find out that you can not attend, please call to cancel. We have had some training sessions that have had waiting lists. When a person calls to cancel, this allows us to call the first person on the waiting list to fill the empty slot. Unfortunately, we have had many instances where registered participants did not call to cancel and did not show up for the training session. This meant that those on the waiting list were unable to fill empty slots.

We have been sending the Regulatory Specialists a list of those participants who have attended a training session. Beginning in July 2008, we will be notifying the Regulatory Specialists and Licensing Specialists of those child care providers who have registered for a training session, did not call to cancel and did not show up for the training session.

It is important to register for training sessions. We require a five person minimum before we will conduct training sessions. Registering also ensures that you will be notified if the training is cancelled for any reason.

You can call the Elkins office at 637-2840 or 1-877-862-3103 to register for or cancel your registration for a training session.

Behavior Consultant Services Available

If you are perplexed by child behaviors and do not know what to do, this might be the answer. Child care providers registered through MountainHeart and parents of a child in the program, may utilize the services of the Behavior Consultant. These services include observation, behavior management strategies, room arrangement, referrals to other agencies, resource materials (books, handouts, etc.), training, and other technical assistance. The service is free of charge. However, some services require the consent of the child's legal guardian before being initiated.

The Behavior Consultant providing services for Region V is James Weber. He is housed in the Weston Office and can be reached at (304) 269-5332 or toll free at 1-866-232-9227.

Keeping Infants and Toddlers Safe & Healthy

By: Shannon Nichols, I/T Specialist

To help every child's brain develop, caregivers need to provide many different things. Some essentials to healthy development include: interacting and playing with the child, providing comforting and loving touches, developing strong, trusting relationships with the child, supporting their self-esteem through respect of individual differences, and plenty of opportunities for play, communication, music and reading. Providing a safe and healthy environment is also critical to optimal development.

A safe environment allows infants and toddlers the freedom to explore their surroundings without having to worry about getting hurt and sends a message to the child that they don't have to be afraid of their environment and that they can trust that you will keep them safe. If children are constantly getting hurt while in your care, they begin to be reluctant to venture out and explore new things and may lose trust in you.

A healthy environment is also important to development because it helps children to use their energy to explore, learn and grow rather than draining their energy due to sickness. Think about how much easier it is to learn something new when you are well rested, well fed and don't have the sniffles and a cough than when you aren't feeling well, are tired or hungry.

Here are some ways to make sure you are providing a safe and healthy environment for infants and toddlers:

Healthy Environment

*Washing hands frequently for at least 20 seconds using liquid soap and warm water.

*Provide nutritious meals and snacks

*Sanitize toys and equipment frequently (after each use if it goes in their mouth)

*Take care of your own health

*Brush teeth regularly or wipe infant's gums with a moist towel

Safe Environment

*Prevent choking by: NOT propping bottles or using bottles to serve solid foods.

*Practice emergency plans regularly (maintain first aid and emergency evacuation kits and keep first aid and CPR trainings up to date)

*Follow "Back to Sleep" practices to reduce the risk of SIDS, unless you have written directions from a doctor to do otherwise.

*Care for small groups of infants and toddlers and get to know their individual abilities

*Select and use appropriate equipment and materials (NO walkers or items smaller than 1.25 inches in diameter and shorter than 2.25 inches in length)

Infants and toddlers depend on you to meet their every need. If you can keep them safe and healthy, you're giving them a great start at developing all of the other skills necessary for successful learning.

For more information on SIDS and Back to Sleep, check out our training this quarter titled "Sudden Infant Death Syndrome."

Do You Have A Plan?

By: Cheryl Wolfe, TRAILS ECS

Every year nearly 100,000 fires are started by children. More people die in fires than in hurricanes, earthquakes, floods, and other natural disasters. In 2007, there were 8,211 fires reported in West Virginia, 64 people lost their lives, and property damage estimated $122,313,099. West Virginia has a higher death toll from fire than in almost any other state, due to the fact that 60% of West Virginians live in rural areas. Emergency response to fire is often delayed in rural areas. Child care providers must have a fire escape plan and practice it year round. Here are some simple steps to follow:

1. Make sure your plan has two ways out of each room
2. Make sure everyone in the household practices how to properly operate and open locked doors and windows
3. Designate a meeting place outside and take attendance
4. Practice escaping from every room

in the home

5. Never open doors that are hot to the touch

6. Once out, stay out and call 911

October 5-11, 2008 is Fire Safety Week. The Super Saturday on October 18, 2008 at the Lewis County Fire Department will have Kenny James conducting fire extinguisher training and providers will get hands-on use in a controlled environment. This is one training you do not want to miss!

Internet Safety

by Jim Weber, Behavior Consultant

What a lucky time it is for our children. With a wealth of information available at their fingertips, they can learn history, science, and health issues simply by typing a word into the computer and clicking a mouse. Their lives are so much improved over what we experienced. They can use the computer to research school reports, communicate with teachers, talk to their friends and send letters to their relatives. All of this is accomplished in just a moment of time.

Unfortunately, with these vast improvements, there are increased concerns and dangers out there lurking on the web. Some surveys indicate that one in three children have been exposed to sexual material on the Internet. Not all of this is intentional. With a missed keystroke your child may enter into an area with objectionable materials. It is important that we be aware of what our children see and hear on the Internet.

You don't have to be a computer expert to do this. Although young people are learning about computers at an early age, parents and care givers can exercise control over what their children do on the Internet. Many Internet Service Providers (ISPs) provide parental controls so you may better monitor what your child can access on the Internet. Most ISPs have information attached to their installed program that you can access. They also have help desks to assist you and answer your questions.

It is important to spend time with your children online and offline. The best way to make sure that your children are not getting into trouble on the Internet or anywhere else is to stay engaged with them. Get your children to show you what they do on the computer and what websites they visit. This will help you feel more comfortable with and knowledgeable of computer operations. If objectionable materials surface, show your children how to deal with it. Advise them not to release any personal information about themselves or personal information about others to the Internet. Remember that anything entered into the Internet may be seen by untold numbers of people. Teach your children never to open, read or respond to messages from someone they do not know.

"Structure the environment, not the child"
By: David Elkind

Supervise the use of the computer by keeping it in common areas of your home. Regularly ask your children with whom they are communicating and what sites they are visiting. Limit and monitor the amount of time your child spends on the Internet, as excessive time online may indicate a problem. Remind your children that Internet usage is a privilege, not a right. Creating family rules for Internet usage might also be helpful. These rules may include statements about prior permission, time limits, periods when the computer is available, when to use e-mail, and if chat rooms are permitted. Have your family rules in place and posted before your children begin using the computer. Children will find it easier to accept and follow rules that already have been established.

Ask your children to tell you when anything questionable or uncomfortable happens to them online. Make it clear that they will not lose Internet privileges if they tell you. Family rules and values apply on the Internet as they do in real life, so explain to your children why you think a site is inappropriate.

Monitoring Internet safety is another challenge that we can add to our list of responsibilities. By following a few rules we will accomplish this goal and ultimately provide for the safekeeping of our children.

TRAILS TIPS

By: Janet Aitchison, TRAILS ECS

Make snack and meal time fun with personalized placemats.

Start with inexpensive vinyl window shades. Outline a plate and cup with permanent marker and label each placemat with a child's name, "Cheryl's Place". Another possibility, put a photograph in the center of a heavy sheet of paper, write the child's name underneath and let them decorate it. Laminate it or cover it with clear contact paper. You could also cut the paper into different shapes, depending on the season.
